BNLY LAW IS THEIR WILL. Striking Example Is the First Comptroller of the Currency, Whose Decisions Cannot Even Br Vetned by the President, Who Has the Power of Removal.

Among the most remarkable features of this government by the people is the extraordinary authority vested in certain to efficials at Washington. For instance, no man in the United States withis each power in money matt 73 as the first comptroller of the curoney. He is entirely independent of it scent it of the treasury, and even preserve lastro means of coercing un, as the following story shows: When Grant was in the White House, First Comptroller Taylor refused to counters on a warrant for the payment of a big claim out of the funds of the treasury. The president summoned him and said:

"I will not, Mr. President," replied be recalcitrant official.

'You must sign."

"Then I will compel you to do so," said Jeneral Grant. "You have not the power," rejoined the comptroller coolly and respectfully. "We will see about that," said the president. "I will consult the attorney general."

The attorney general, on being consulted, staird that the comptroller was right-he could not be forced to countorsign the warrant. Next day the president summoned Mr. Tayler and said: "I find that I cannot compel you to countersign the warrant. However, I can get another first comptroller." "Very well, Mr. President," replied the officer. "You can have my resignation, but not my signature."

In fact, the only way in which the president can override a decision of this powerful official is by dismissing him and appointing another man. All of the accounts of the government, except those which relate to customs and the postoffice department, are settled by warrants countersigned by the first comptroller. Without his signature the payments cannot be made.

There are two autocrats in the postoffice department. One of them is the fered for mailing is immoral or not. He acts as censor for the people. Whenever a postmaster in any city is doubtful regarding the morality of a publication that is sought to be mailed, he forwards a copy of the suspected work to the third assistant postmaster general, by whom it is referred to the assistant attorney general. Very likely the latter may be too busy to investigate the subject personally, in Fine Wines and Brandies, Claret and which case he turns it over to one of his clerks, who peruses it and marks any passage which he considers indecent. Thus the law lord has simply to glance over the selected tidbits of impropriety and pass on them. The assistant attorney general also determines what mail matter shall be considered fraudulent and be excluded as such from the post.

The third assistant postmaster general is himself an autocrat. He has authority to exercise his own discretion in depriving periodical publications of the advantage of second class postal rates. Publications intended for advertising purposes primarily are not allowed those rates. On account of the "Krentzer Sonata" a whole series of books, of which t was one, was shut out of the mails.

Publishers commonly get out volumes in series, because in this shape they go second class as periodical publications so long as they are issued at least four times a year. The decision against that work did not actually exclude it from the post, because it could be and was sent at first class rates, sealed, so that nobody could lawfully open the package and find out what was inside.

The autocrat of the department of agriculture is the chief of the bureau of animal industry. He has authority to kill any animal he may choose anywhere in the United States. When one of his inspectors reports that such and such cattle are afflicted with an infectious disease, he orders them purchased and slaughtered. The value of the beasts is judged by two appraisers, one chosen by the owner and the other by the bureau. If they cannot agree, they appoint a third person to decide. In case a man refused to have his live stock thus disposed of, the police and United States marshals would be summoned. The payment adjudicated is made by check. The chief of the bureau's authority in such matters is absolute over the territories and District of Columbia. For operations in any state he must have the consent of the governor, but the governor's consent cannot be withheld because he is in a position to coerce the state. If he chooses, he can quarantine the state, preventing all animals from going into or coming out for an indefinite period.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat

Wire as a Strengthener.

The method of strengthening copper steam pipes by means of coiled metal wire has been quite generally adopted in the Italian navy. The practice is to serve the tubes with one or two layers of wire wound under tension. The method is not considered applicable to other than straight tubes. The wire is of sufficient strength to carry the full load of steam, and the tension used in winding is about 14 tons persquare inch. The wire is put on in two or three independent spirals, and the ends of each are independently fastened to the flanges.

A POPULIST ADDRESS.

The Populist Senators and Representatives in Congress have issued an address to the people, and among the Senators who signed the appeal are Stewart and Jones of Nevada. The address appeals to the people to take up the cause of silver. It calls attention to the fact that the arts require almost the total gold production, and the decrease in the volume of gold coins in circulation, as the result of hoarding, has caused the metal to aprepeal of the purchasing clause of the police do not apprehend danger, but month of November, as a day of Sherman act destroys silver as a money they think it best to adopt precautionof ultimate redemption and debases it ary measures. to credit money to float only by its redemption in gold. The Senator has been recognized for nearly twenty years as one of the greatest champions the board with a claim against the of silver remonetization. His speech in 1878 in advocacy of free coinage was the most comprehensive treatise on the relations of gold and silver to each other as money metals ever published. He clung to the Republican party, as many free coinage men did to the Demogratic party, until fully convinced that it was against the remonetization of silver, and then severed his connection with it as unceremoniously as Senator Stewart did a year ago.

ATHE STUDY OF A WORD.

The Resources and Variety of Information The great dictionaries are a library in

The Resources and Variety of Information
It is likely to Furnish.
The great ductionaries are a library in themselves and furnish an exhaustless source of information. A study of a single word like cross in the Century Dictionary shows the resources and variety of information that a familiar word may furnish. There are 15½ columns devoted to this word and its combinations. There are 24 pictorial illustrations. All in all there are 257 different words thade out of cross which have to be defined. In the great Oxford Dictionary there are 11 pages given to this word, or twice as much as in the Century. In the Century the study is tury. In the Century the study is

The fundamental idea is, of course the cross, the crux for crucifying, but it has come to have a variety of meaning as a monument, a crucifix, the atonement, the Christian religion itself, any suffering for Christ's sake, anything that thwarts or vexes, a mixing of breeds in animal breeding, a term used in changing plants, a joint in a pipe, the accidental contact of two electric wires, a sportsman phrase for a contest dishon-

Then aress becomes an adjective, with several meanings, as falling, athwart, passing from one of two positions, perverse, etc., to the other, being opposed, being peevish or fretful, ill tempered, thoroughly contrary, in the breeder's vocabulary. Then it becomes an adverb, meaning transversely or adversely. Then it becomes a verb, with all kinds of significance, from the running of a line to cross a thing, to cancel by crossing, to cross one's self in devotion, passing from side to side of a man, to go over a body of water, to obstruct, to cause to interfere, to cross plants, to hoist from the deck to its place on the mast any of the lighter yards.

Then there is the preposition, in riding cross-country or walking cross-lots. All this with the simple word itself, which goes cavorting from the most sacred thought in the world to the breeder's and the sportsman's language of the coop and ranch. After this the mysteries begin. There are crosses-unserated, arellane, bezanty, bretesse, catoosed, commisse, crenele, estoile, fitche, fleury, gringole, lambeaux, moline, nowyed, nyle, quatre-foil, saltier, sarele, resarcoled. Then there are the innumerable compounds of cross from cross-armed, cross-bated, cross-biter, cross-bar and cross-bun, through cross-flucan, cross-ruff, crosssower and cross-spale to cross-wort.

Then there are a cross-grained set of crosses, such as crossarchinal, cross archus, crossette, crossopinal, crossopterygia, crossopterygian, crossopterygidae, crossopterygii, crossopterygia, crossopterygium, crossopus, crossorhined and eroscorhininae.

It is incomprehensible that a word so simple should have gone rollicking all over the earth, into the bowels of the earth, into the depths of the sea, among the fowls of the air, the horse upon the turf, to card table, to the ships upon the sea, to the fishes in their glee, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seamstress in her labors, to the spider in his webbing, to the spinner at his loom, to the lawyers in their pleading, to a shrew in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the miner at his lode, to the Turk as he sits, to the sword of the gladiator, to the expert with his telescope, to the woman in her gazing and in her dressing, to the athletes in their wrestling and to the swindler at his arts.—A. E. Winship in Journal of Education.

Queer Phenomena of Falling Bodies. I am unable to say who first noticed the peculiar caprices of a stone or other heavy body dropped from the top of a high tower, but it is nevertheless a curious fact that such objects invariably fall slightly to the east of the perpendicular line. Persons of inquiring turn of mind who ask why this is as it is may find an answer in the following: All falling bodies partake of the earth's eastward motion to a greater or lesser extent. Therefore during the time occupied by a stone In falling from t' t jof a high tower or other emit a consearth's rotary mo-tion has contact an appreciable dis-tance to t' east. The initial impetus of the stone has carried it to the eastward also, therefore it strikes the earth to the east of the perpendicular, varying in degree according to the height from which it has fallen. A curious article on this subject may be found in the Leipsic Zeitung of May 9, 1889, page 3. The author of the article, who has given it the title of "The Nonperpendicularity of High Towers,' claims that the tower on St. Peter's cathedral at Rome leans 18 inches to the east.—St. Louis Republic.

A Singular Coincidence. The chaplain of an American jail vouches for the following. A little boy was taken by his parents to visit the prison, and on passing one of the cells in which a notorious criminal had been incarcerated his father playfully pushed him in and closed the door upon him. The child, overcome by some vague terror, screamed aloud and could scarcely be comforted by his mother's caresses. Years passed. The lad half thoughtlessly fell into crime and was only recalled to his better nature on finding himself, having been sentenced to a term of imprisonment, in the identical cell into which he had been momentarily thrust as a child.
